Government Girls School, Dujod

During the school break, around 30 girls gathered on the court with full energy. A government school space turning into a place of focus, teamwork and joy. Their dedication to practice every single day shows what belief and opportunity can do. Small steps today are shaping confident young leaders for tomorrow. The game isn't just about basketball — it's building resilience and self-belief.

Story of Transformation

Bhanu Pratap

At just 15 years old, Bhanu Pratap Singh Rathore exemplifies how discipline, mentorship, and access to the right environment can shape a young athlete's future. Born in Akoda village, Nagaur (Rajasthan), Bhanu grew up with limited educational and sporting resources. At the age of 8, he moved to Dujod to live with his paternal grandparents, who played a pivotal role in supporting his education and personal growth.

Bhanu was introduced to basketball at Angels Academy and later at Akashdeep School. Despite the absence of formal sports infrastructure, he trained consistently on a basic community ground, often practicing late into the evening. His dedication paid off when his performance at the Sub Junior National Basketball Championship drew attention from selectors.

This opportunity led him to trials at Corvess American Academy in Mumbai, where he was selected. He is currently in Class 10, maintaining a 3.2 GPA (out of 4), while undergoing intensive basketball training in a competitive environment.

A significant part of Bhanu's development has been the guidance of Coach Lokendra Singh and Vikram Singh (Retd. Army), whose mentorship strengthened his discipline, confidence, and leadership both on and off the court.

Bhanu remains deeply connected to his roots. He continues to return to the court in Dujod, training alongside younger players and encouraging them to pursue the sport with commitment and purpose.

With continued support and focus, Bhanu now aspires to compete at the senior national level and ultimately represent India on the international stage.
